

Lifestyle

OCT 5, 2015 @ 04:15 PM 78 VIEWS

Starchitect Designs $30 Million Hollywood Hills Bachelor Pad for 'Full House' Creator

By: Mady Dahlstrom, Porch.com

Jeff Franklin, creator of the hit '80s and '90s sitcom "Full House," listed his three-story Hollywood Hills home back in 2014, for $30 million. The writer-producer-director hired starchitect Richard Landry of Landry Design Group to design a deluxe bachelor pad above the famed Sunset Strip. Los Angeles-based architect and luxury home designer Richard Landry has a reputation of designing megamansions for millionaires, movie stars, and moguls. His client list includes Mark Wahlberg, Tom Brady and Gisele Bundchen, and “Real Housewives” star Lisa Vanderpump.

The Southern California architect designed a 5-bedroom, 8-bathroom contemporary home perched on a half-acre hilltop overlooking endless views of the LA skyline.

Approaching the house, guests are greeted by a dramatic entrance of modern materials and texture, large glass windows, and LED backlit panels glowing through the exterior. Entering on the second floor, the front door looks down onto a beautiful circular glass staircase. A seamless design of stone and glass tiptoes between the inside and outside, while Venetian plastered surfaces warm up the large, open spaces. Up on the top level, the master bedroom and bathroom feature a fully retractable skylight, drop-down ceiling television, indoor-outdoor shower, and private terrace with lounge area. Outside, the home curves around the backyard, addressing all views the property has to offer. An infinity-edge swimming pool paired with fire pits and an open bar sets the scene for the ultimate entertaining space.

 Gallery

Collingwood Residence

Launch Gallery

8 images

From the five-star master bedroom and bathroom to the custom wine cellar, movie theater, and 6-car subterranean garage that can be converted into a night club, Franklin's Hollywood Hills home has everything a lifelong bachelor could ask for.

<http://www.forbes.com/sites/porch/2015/10/05/starchitect-designs-30-million-hollywood-hills-bachelor-pad-for-full-house-creator/>